

Biography

Alan Gregory Morris is Professor in the Department of Human Biology at the University of Cape Town. A Canadian by birth and upbringing, Professor Morris is also a naturalised South African with an equal commitment to both countries. He has an undergraduate degree in Biology from Wilfrid Laurier University in Waterloo Ontario, and a PhD in Anatomy and Physical Anthropology from the University of the Witwatersrand in Johannesburg. Professor Morris has published extensively on the prehistoric and early historic peoples of southern Africa but has also maintained an active interest in more modern South African including the Anglo-Boer War and the history of science in South Africa.